STATE OF MARYLAND

J. Millard Tawes, Governor

Maryland State Planning Department

Revised April 1, 1964

FOREWORD

The Maryland County Economic Data Book, first published in December, 1950, has achieved recognition as a most useful and easy reference source on the socio-economic aspects of the various political subdivisions within the State. Designed for use by local, civic and business groups, as well as for students and individual citizens, its widespread usage is confirmed by the fact that this edition is the fifth revision of the original publication.

Subjects which are treated on a county by county basis include population, employment, manufacturing, agriculture, business, median family income, estimated effective buying income and assessed value of real and personal property. Appendix tables include additional information on bank deposits, retail sales and use taxes, motor vehicle registration, newspapers, radio and television stations, city and county planning commissions and a completely new listing of State and Federally owned land within the State.

It is intended that this new revision serve the same useful public service as its predecessors, providing the latest up-to-date information from all available, reliable sources at the lowest possible cost to the public.

STATE OF MARYLAND

MARYLAND IN MINIATURE

"Maryland Day" is historically March 25, 1634 and marks the traditionally celebrated date of the arrival of Maryland's first settlers on St. Clement's Island (Blakistone) in St. Mary's County.

Maryland, often referred to as the "land of pleasant living", was named after Queen Henrietta Maria, wife of King Charles I. It is not commonly known, however, that the State was almost named "Crescentia" —land of increase—an equally prophetic title.

The State's 9,874 square miles of land, 703 square miles of inland water and 1,726 square miles of Chesapeake Bay are situated over three levels of terrain with progressively higher altitudes from east to west—Coastal Plains, Piedmont Plateau or "Foothills" and the Appalachian province. Elevation ranges from sea level on its Atlantic Coast to 3,360 feet, the crest of Backbone Mountain in Garrett County. Mean elevation for the State is 350 feet above sea level.

The Chesapeake Bay, largest inland bay in the United States and one of the most beautiful, is 185 miles long and 3,237 square miles in area. Slightly more than one-half (53.3%) of this prodigious body of water, which is a fisherman's paradise, lies within the legal boundaries of Maryland. The remaining 1,511 square miles are situated within the province of Virginia. An indication of its productive and recreational value to Maryland fishermen is provided in these impressive statistics:

1961—Maryland Seafood Production

Fish—21,397,000 pounds—value	$1,422,000
Crabs—29,350,000 pounds—value	$2,081,000
Oysters 2,117,000 U. S. bushels—value	$7,802,000
Soft Clams—390,000 U. S. bushels—value	$1,231,000
Hard Clams—111,600 U. S. bushels—value	$ 217,000

Chief navigable rivers in the State number twenty-one and include the Potomac, Patuxent, South, Severn, Magothy, Patapsco, Gunpowder, Bush, Northeast, Elk, Bohemia, Sassafras, Chester, Wye, Miles, Tred Avon, Choptank, Little Choptank, Nanticoke, Wicomico and Pocomoke. Fifteen of Maryland's twenty-three counties border on tidal waters and the length of the shore line, including the shore of islands, is 3,190 miles, a distance 332 miles further than the number of miles between Baltimore and San Francisco (2,858).

Maryland's forests cover 2,586,016 acres or about 46 per cent of the land area. Chief forest products are lumber, pulpwood and pilings. Eleven State forests and one State nursery are spread over 119,184 acres. For recreational purposes there are twenty-one State parks containing 21,500 acres. Included are Atlantic Ocean beaches, Chesapeake Bay shores, dense forests and high mountains. Parks provide cabins, campsites, swimming, boating, hiking and mountain climbing.

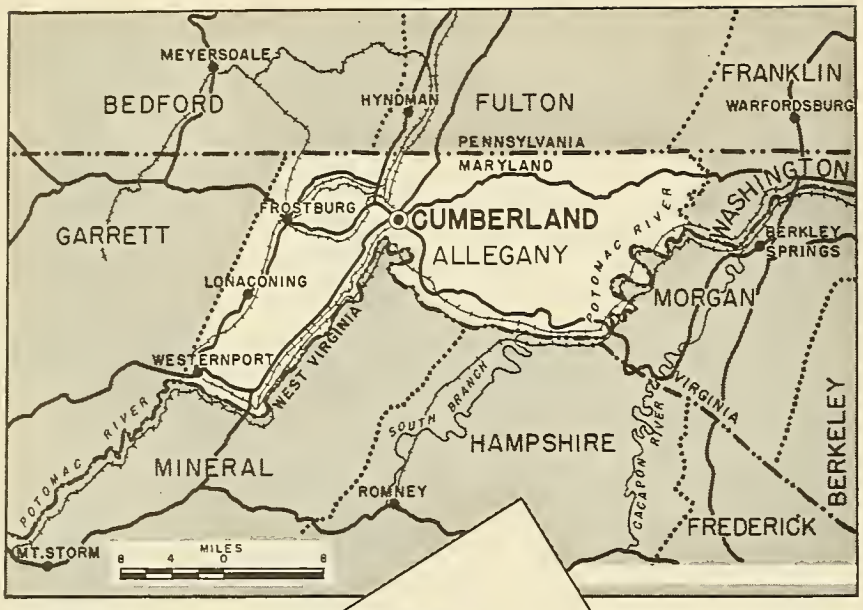
ALLEGANY COUNTY



ESTABLISHED 1789

Allegany County, in the northwestern part of Maryland, has a land area of 426 square miles. The mean annual temperature is 50.9° and the annual precipitation, 41.37 inches. A wooded, mountainous region, it ranks third among the counties of the State in the number employed in mining and quarrying, but it also ranks a close fifth in the number of those employed in manufacturing. Its chief agricultural activities, according to value of products sold, are dairying and the raising of livestock. Hay and corn are the chief feed crops; apples and peaches, the leading fruit crops. Cumberland, the County Seat, is the State's third largest city and the center of several important manufacturing establishments. The County is rich in scenic and recreational attractions and also sites of historic interest.

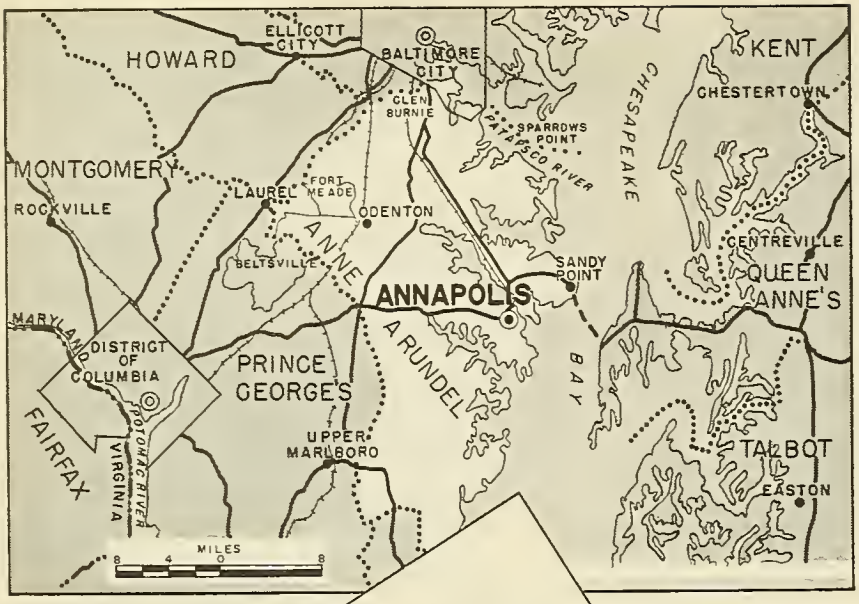
ANNE ARUNDEL COUNTY



ESTABLISHED 1650

Anne Arundel County, a part of the Baltimore Standard Metropolitan Area, has a land area of 417 square miles, a mean annual temperature of 56.4° and an annual precipitation of 40.43 inches. Annapolis, the State Capital, is also the County Seat and the home of the U. S. Naval Academy and St. John's College. Tobacco is the main source of cash farm income, but corn and small grains are also grown. Livestock feeding is comparatively important. The County ranks fourth in the number employed in manufacturing, most of which is in the north near Baltimore City. Friendship International Airport, largest in the State, is located in this general area. Fishing is an important activity. Numerous tidal inlets account for the development of a large summer resort trade.

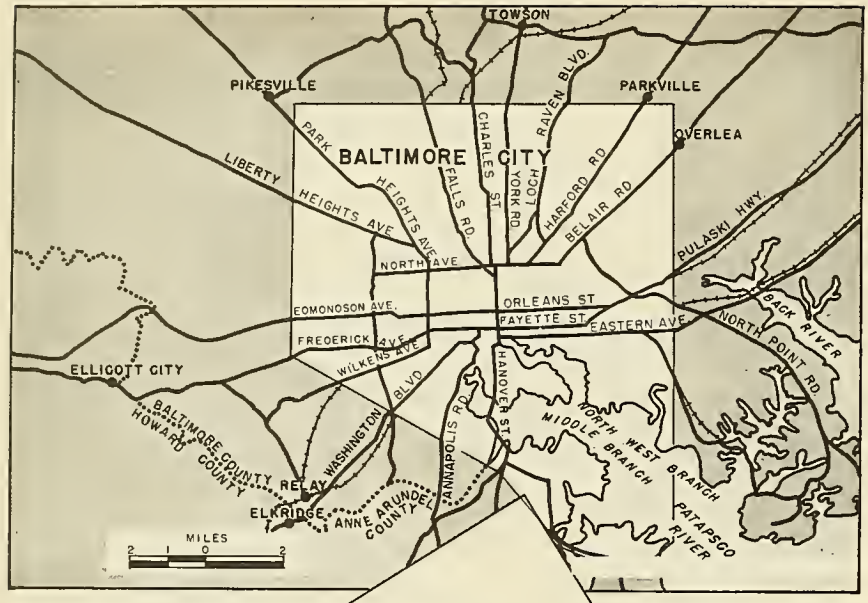
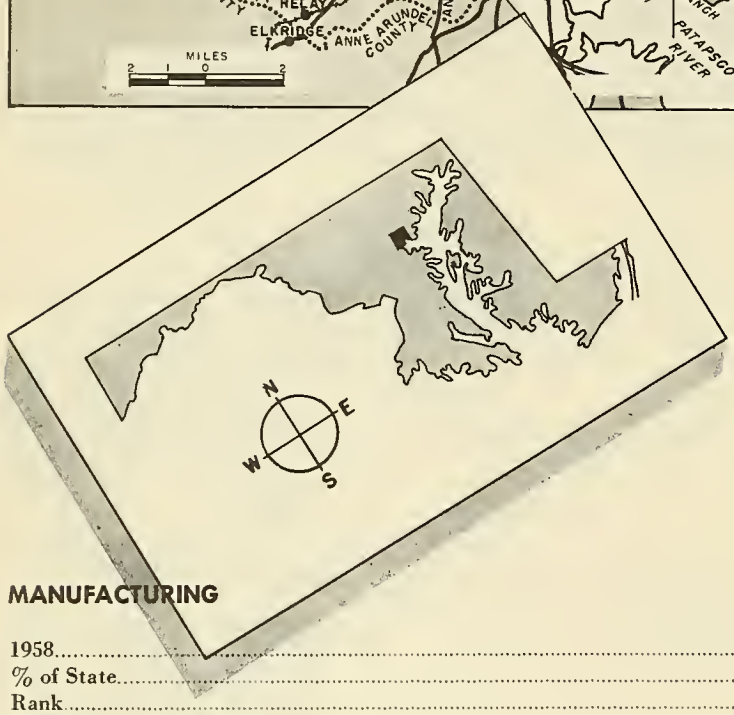
BALTIMORE CITY





FOUNDED 1729

SEPARATED FROM COUNTY 1850

Baltimore City has a land area of 79 square miles, a mean annual temperature of 57.1° and an annual precipitation of 42.59 inches. Strategically situated, with an internationally important deep-water port, it is a center of trade and industry, and the sixth largest city in the United States. The greatest portion of Maryland's industry is concentrated in and around the City. The Johns Hopkins University and Hospital, Peabody Institute, Walters Art Gallery and Enoch Pratt Free Library are some of the outstanding institutions of higher learning, music, art and literature. Often referred to as the "City of Monuments," Baltimore is rich in landmarks of historic importance.

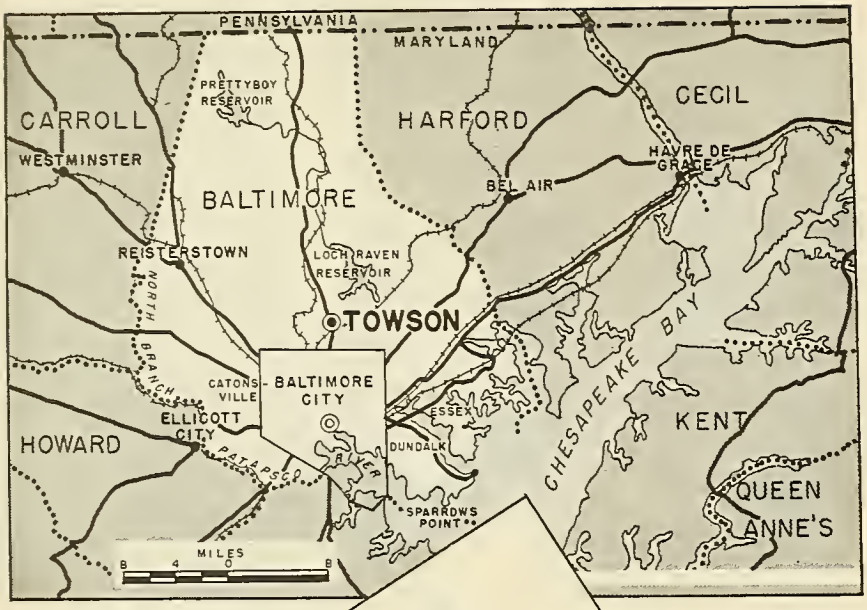
BALTIMORE COUNTY



ESTABLISHED 1659

Baltimore County has a land area of 608 square miles, a mean annual temperature of 53.6° and an annual precipitation of 45.18 inches. The area north of Baltimore City is largely suburban; beyond it lies a prosperous farming section where land values are the highest per acre of any agricultural area of the State. In the hilly central part of the County are large estates where traditional customs of English life are still preserved. Tournaments, fox hunting and cross-country riding lend zest to country life. The County is second only to Baltimore City in the number of industrial plants which include the Bethlehem Steel Mill, largest in the world, the Martin Company's aircraft and missile plant and the Bendix Corporation, electronics and electronic equipment manufacturers. These three firms employ the greatest proportion of production workers, but there are over 200 other manufacturing firms located chiefly in the area fairly adjacent to Baltimore City. Towson is the County Seat.

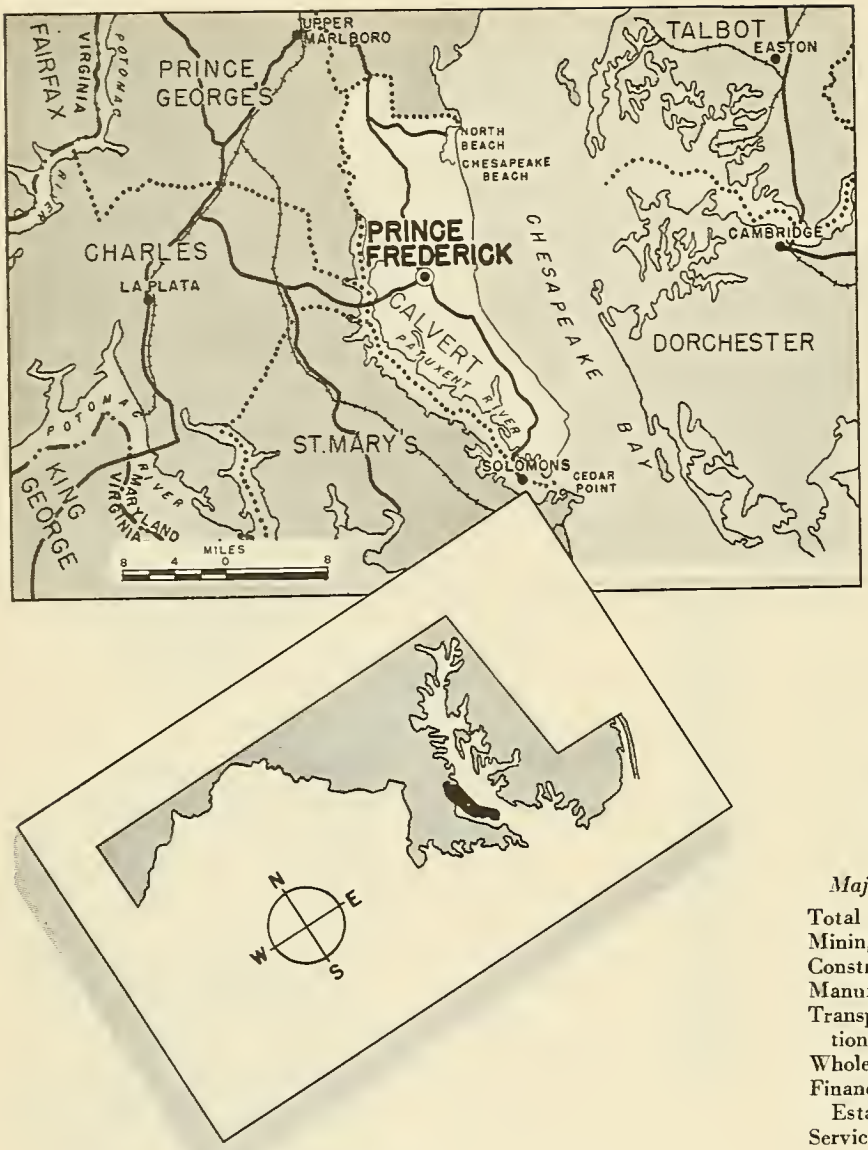
CALVERT COUNTY



ESTABLISHED 1654

Calvert, the smallest county in the State with a land area of only 219 square miles, has a mean annual temperature of 56.6° and an annual precipitation of 43.88 inches. Surrounded on three sides by water, it has important forest, fishing and recreational resources. The southern part of the County is famous for its fishing. Off the extreme southern tip at Solomons Island is located the Chesapeake Biological Laboratory of the Natural Resources Institute of the University of Maryland. The economy is essentially agricultural with tobacco by far the leading product. This crop normally represents 90% of the cash farm income of the County. Established as a county in 1654, it was the fourth in the State and has a number of fine old American homes. Prince Frederick is the County Seat.

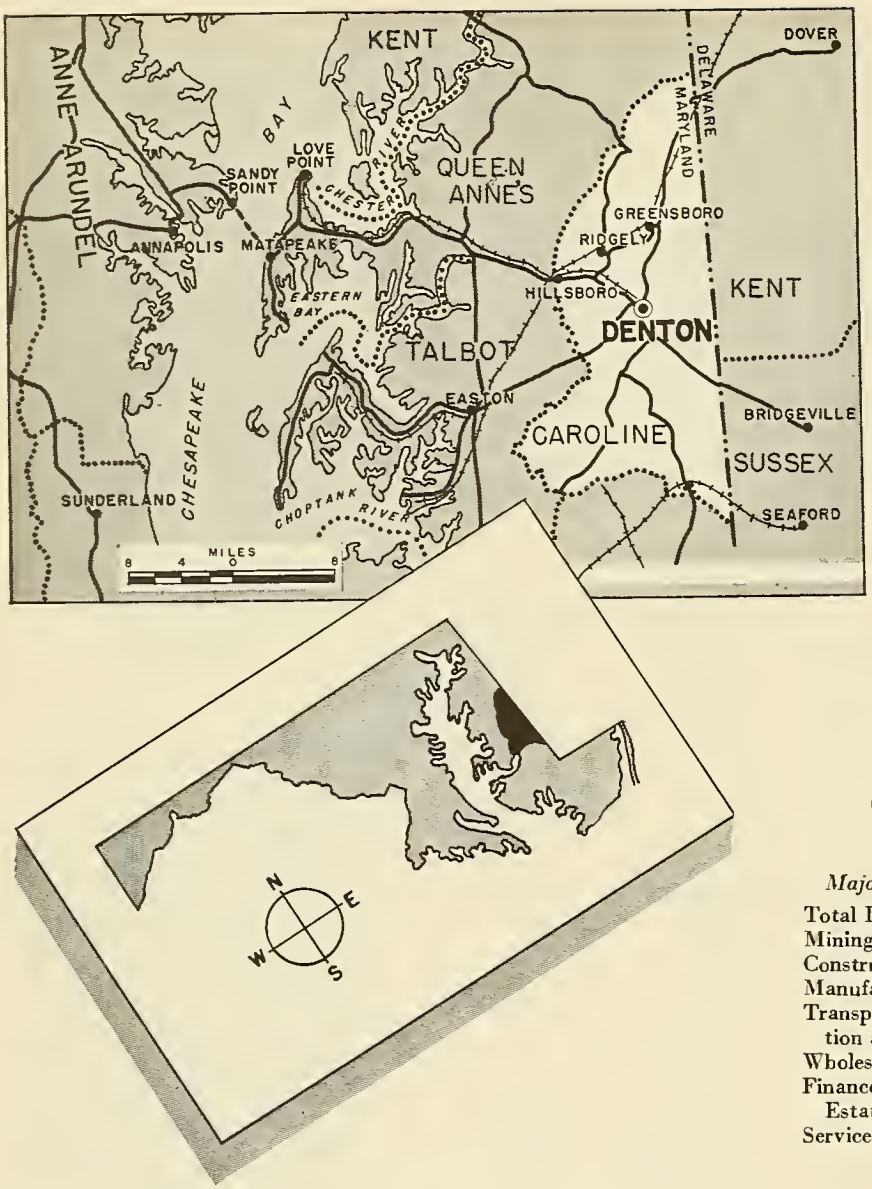
CAROLINE COUNTY



ESTABLISHED 1773

Caroline County has a land area of 320 square miles, a mean annual temperature of 55.8° and an annual precipitation of 45.08 inches. One of the rich farming sections of the Eastern Shore, this County has a diversified agricultural economy in which poultry production and the cultivation of field crops such as corn, small grains and soy beans are important. The County also has considerable industry, particularly in Federalsburg, Ridgely, Denton and Greensboro. It includes plants which produce fertilizer and fruit crates, flour mills, fruit and vegetable canneries, poultry processors, milk condensaries and garment and button manufacturers. The Choptank River, largest stream on the Eastern Shore, is navigable well into the heart of the County. A number of beautiful and interesting old homes delight the visitor. Denton is the County Seat.

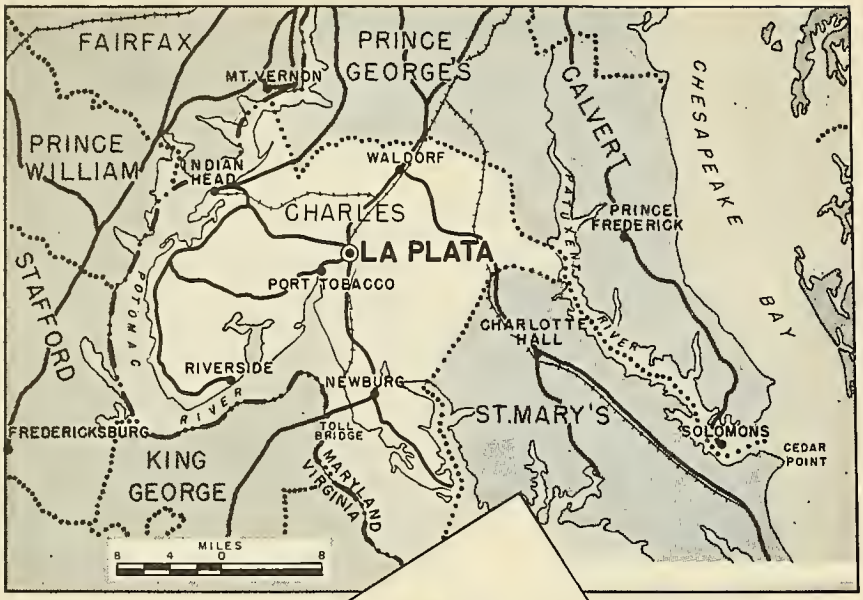
CHARLES COUNTY



ESTABLISHED 1658

Charles County has a land area of 458 square miles, a mean annual temperature of 56.2° and an annual precipitation of 44.74 inches. It is a rural area of gently rolling countryside. Charles is one of the five Maryland counties which derive their main cash farm income from the cultivation of tobacco. Manufacturing is still of minor importance to the County's economy. The numerous patches of swamps are valuable sources of timber and other forest products. Fishing is an important local activity in the tidewater areas. The area, especially around Port Tobacco, has many fine old homes of importance both historically and architecturally. La Plata is the County Seat.

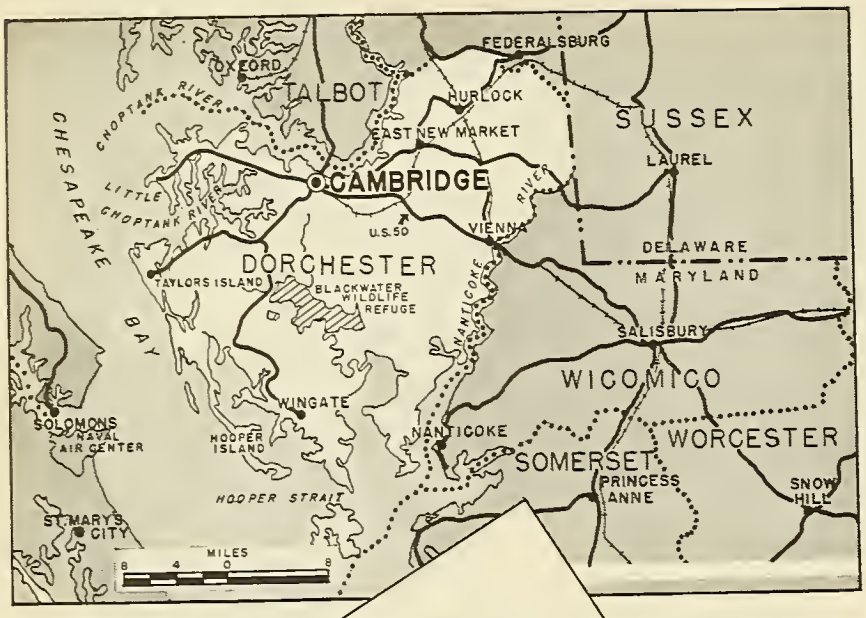
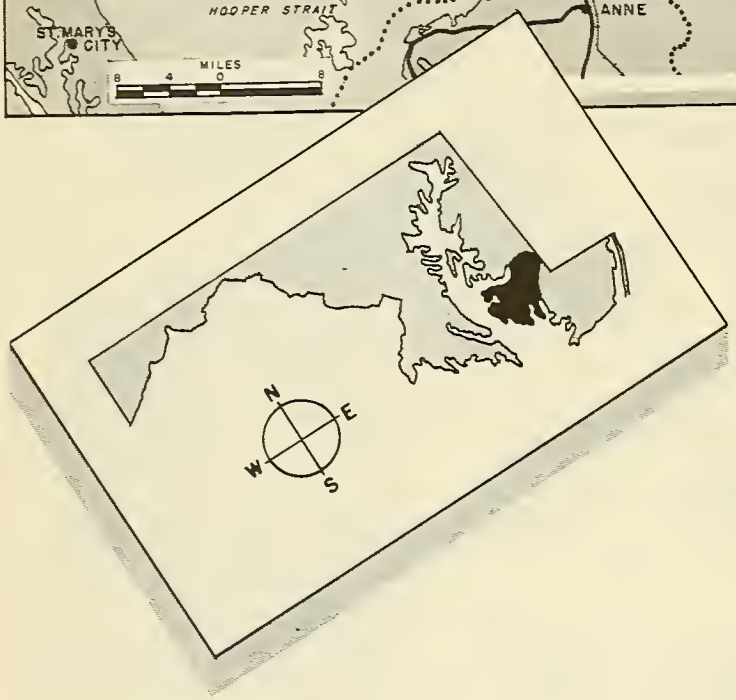
DORCHESTER COUNTY





ESTABLISHED 1668

Dorchester County has a land area of 580 square miles, a mean annual temperature of 55.5° and an annual precipitation of 44.2 inches. It is clearly divided into three topographical areas: the better drained uplands which support a flourishing truck crop industry, the poorly drained lowlands where timber resources predominate, and the tidal marshes which comprise some of the finest muskrat trapping areas in the United States. The unusually fine duck hunting and fishing opportunities here also make the County a sportsman's paradise. The economy of the County is fundamentally that of a food producing and processing area. In the tidewater area are numerous old manors of leading Maryland families and also newer estates. Cambridge is the County Seat.

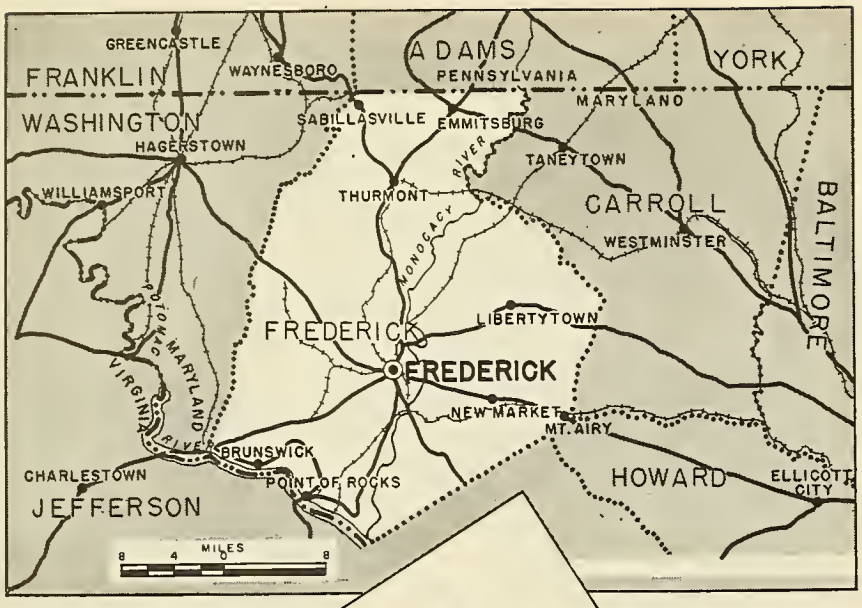
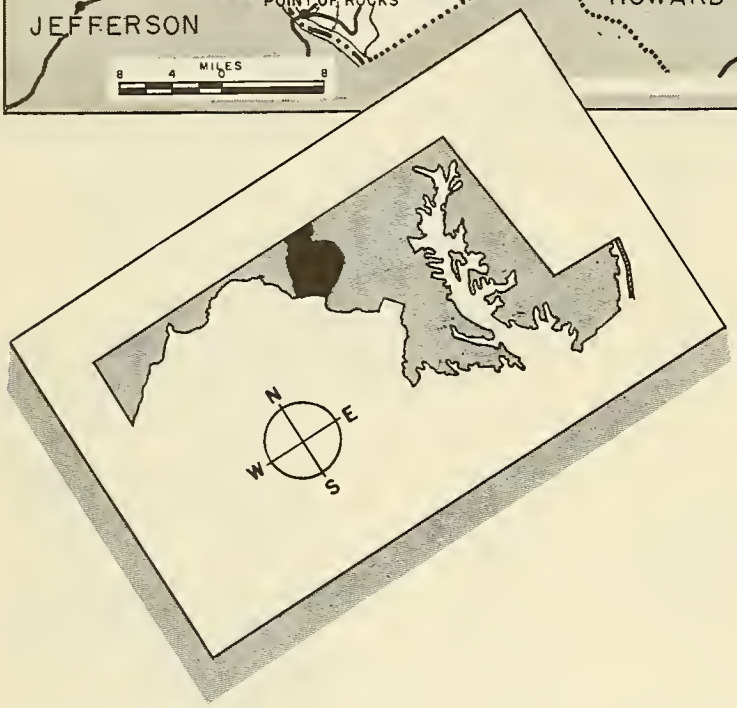
FREDERICK COUNTY





ESTABLISHED 1748

Frederick, with the largest land area of any Maryland county, occupies 664 square miles. It has a mean annual temperature of 54.7° and an annual precipitation of 40.23 inches. Less than a fourth of the total area of the County is mountainous; the rest consists of fertile agricultural land. Farm productivity is high, and the income from the sale of dairy products is almost triple that of any other Maryland county. Manufacturing is diversified and is concentrated in and near the City of Frederick, which is the County Seat. Plentiful transportation facilities, including numerous good highways, have been factors in promoting local prosperity. The County is rich in recreational opportunities and in Revolutionary and Civil War sites.

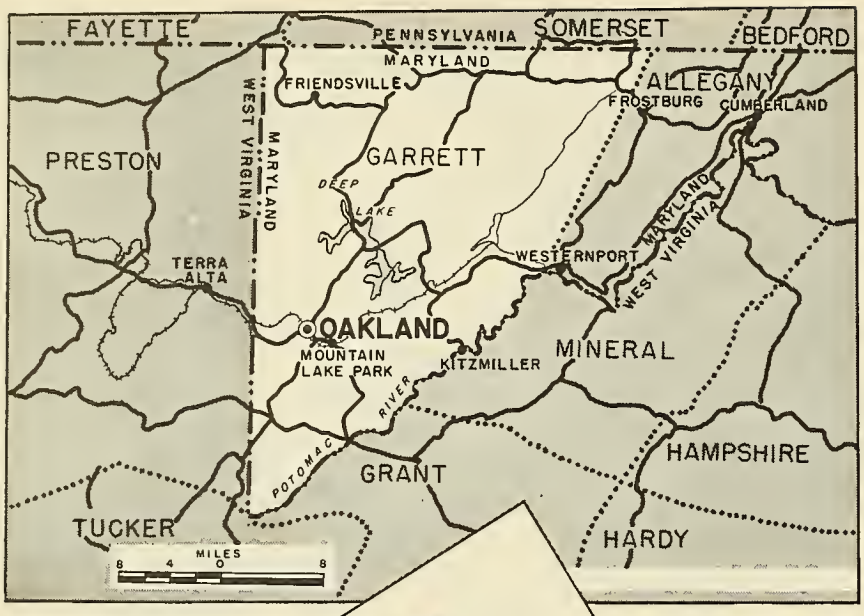
GARRETT COUNTY



ESTABLISHED 1872

Garrett County, westernmost Maryland County, has a land area of 662 square miles, a mean annual temperature of 48.5° and an annual precipitation of 48.41 inches. It contains some of the highest elevations and most rugged areas of the State. These mountains provide opportunities for both summer and winter sports. Over 60% of the acreage of State forests provides for additional recreational opportunities. The County leads the State in the production of hardwood lumber, and supplies many other forest products. Bituminous coal, although reduced in quantity, is still mined; fire clay, limestone and sandstone are also important. Although not a leading agricultural area, it is noted for its production of buckwheat and maple syrup. The County Seat is Oakland.

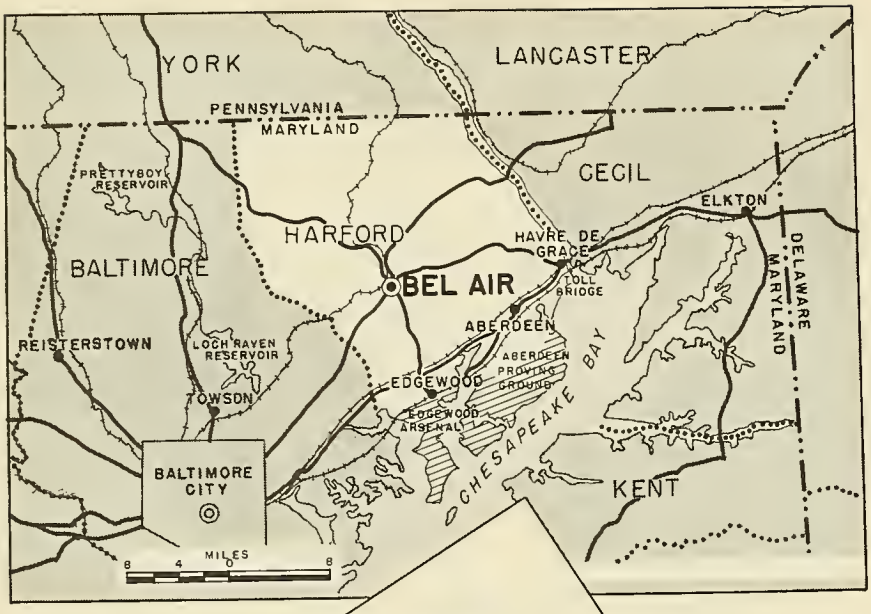
HARFORD COUNTY



ESTABLISHED 1773

Harford County, situated near the head of Chesapeake Bay, has a land area of 448 square miles, a mean annual temperature of 53.3° and an annual precipitation of 43.37 inches. The upper four-fifths of the County lies in the Piedmont Plateau; here the land is partly rolling and partly hilly. The remainder is coastal plain. The rich soil supports diversified agricultural production from which the sale of dairy and livestock products are most valuable. Although the County also has considerable manufacturing, a large number of County residents commute to the nearby Baltimore area to work. Two large military establishments, Aberdeen Proving Grounds and the Army Chemical Center (Edgewood Arsenal) are important to the economy. The County Seat is Bel Air.

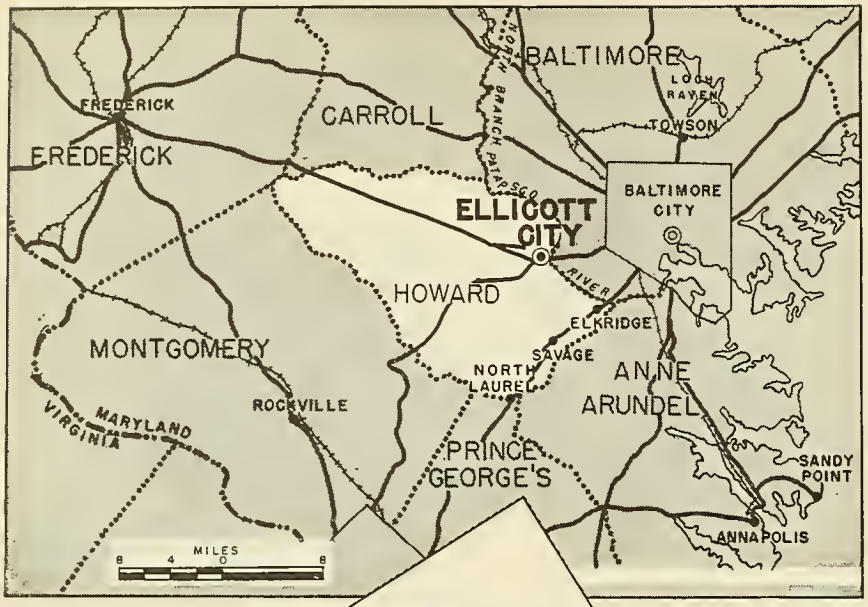
HOWARD COUNTY



ESTABLISHED 1851

Howard County, a part of the Baltimore Standard Metropolitan Area, has a land area of 250 square miles, a mean annual temperature of 54.0° and an annual precipitation of 40.67 inches. Approximately 85% of the County lies in the Piedmont Plateau; the contour varies from gently to strongly rolling. Most of the area is agricultural with a high average farm value. Dairying and livestock raising are the most profitable agricultural activities. The forest area is fairly large but most of it is in small woodlots. The County's manufacturing industry is relatively small but two research laboratories have recently been added. The County Seat is Ellicott City.

Doughoregan Manor, five miles west of Ellicott City. Old colonial mansion; ancestral home of Charles Carroll, a signer of the Declaration of Independence.

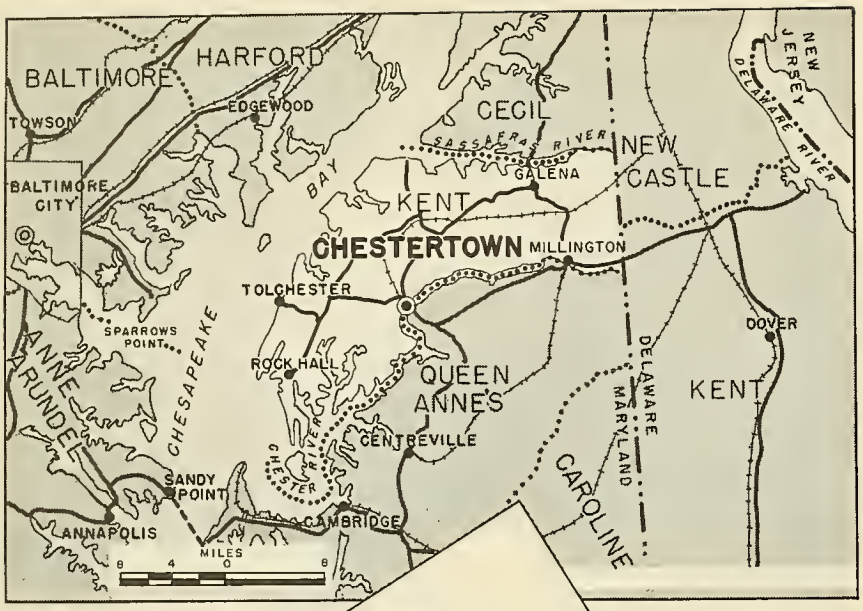
Elk Ridge Landing; important port for shipment of tobacco, grain, and timber in colonial days.

Old Court Road; northeastern part of County. Road to Colonial Court at Joppa Town.

Thomas Viaduct. First curved stone railroad bridge in America. Crosses Patapsco between Baltimore and Howard Counties.

Other historic houses: Oakdale, Belmont, Folly Quarters, Burleigh Manor, Glenelg.

KENT COUNTY



ESTABLISHED 1642

Kent County, with a land area of 284 square miles, a mean average temperature of 55.9° and an annual precipitation of 43.56 inches, is a highly developed agricultural area. Its farms rank first in average size in the State. The value of agricultural products sold is about equally divided between crops and livestock products. Corn, wheat, barley, soybeans and vegetables are the leading crops; dairying and livestock raising are also very important. The chief industry is the canning and preserving of food products. The extensive tidal waters, which yield a variety of seafood products, are the most valuable natural resource of Kent County. The area also provides excellent waterfowl hunting and is the site of attractive summer resorts. Numerous colonial homes and other historic buildings attest to its long and distinguished history as the second oldest county of Maryland. The County Seat is Chestertown.

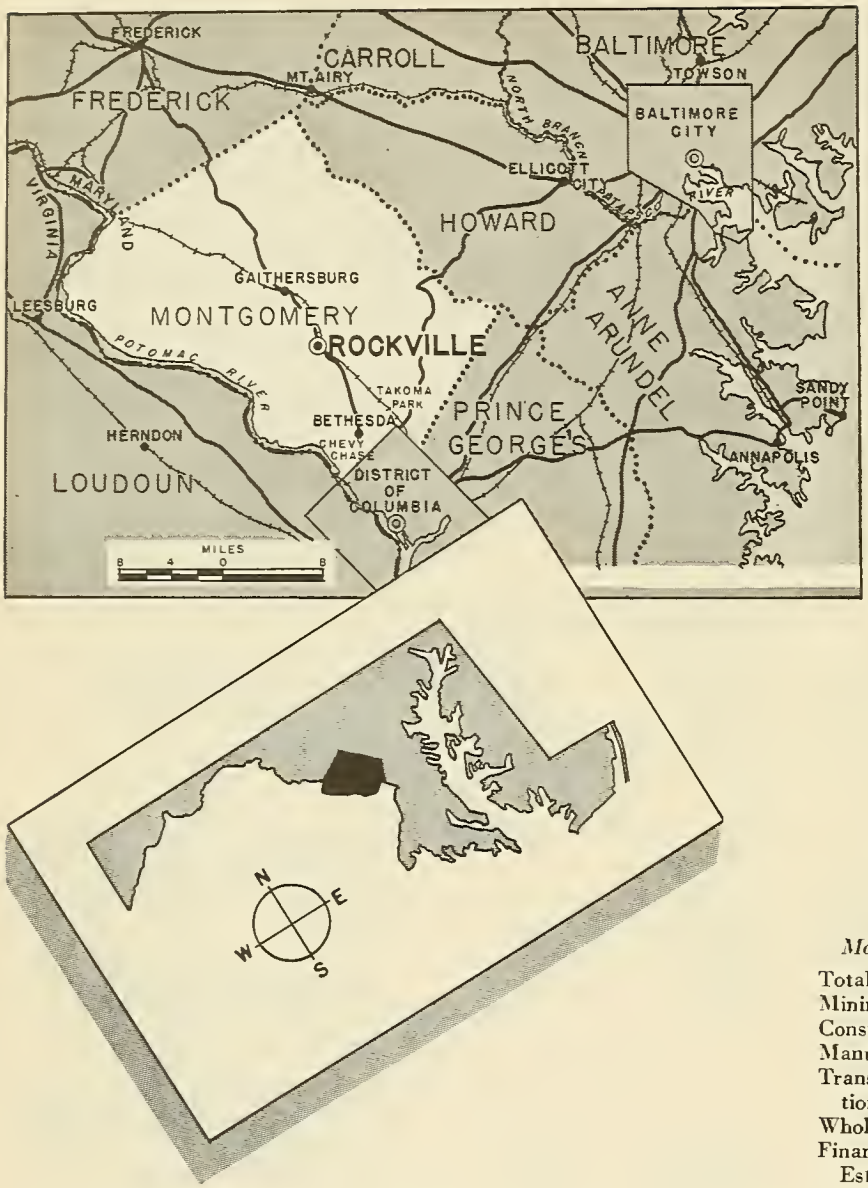
MONTGOMERY COUNTY



ESTABLISHED 1776

Montgomery County has a land area of 493 square miles, a mean annual temperature of 54.7° and an annual precipitation of 43.47 inches. That portion of the County adjoining Washington, D. C. has become a very attractive residential area, and Bethesda, Silver Spring and Wheaton are listed among the largest unincorporated communities in the country. Each has important shopping centers. The northern part of the County is still agricultural. but farmland is being steadily converted into residential developments. Dairying and livestock raising are the major agricultural activities, although there are numerous large nurseries. Rural land values run a close second to those of Baltimore County. Because of its proximity to the Nation's Capital, scientific research and light industry are important to the economy. The Atomic Energy Commission, the National Institutes of Health and the Naval Medical Center are located here, and the National Bureau of Standards will soon move its main office and laboratories to this County.

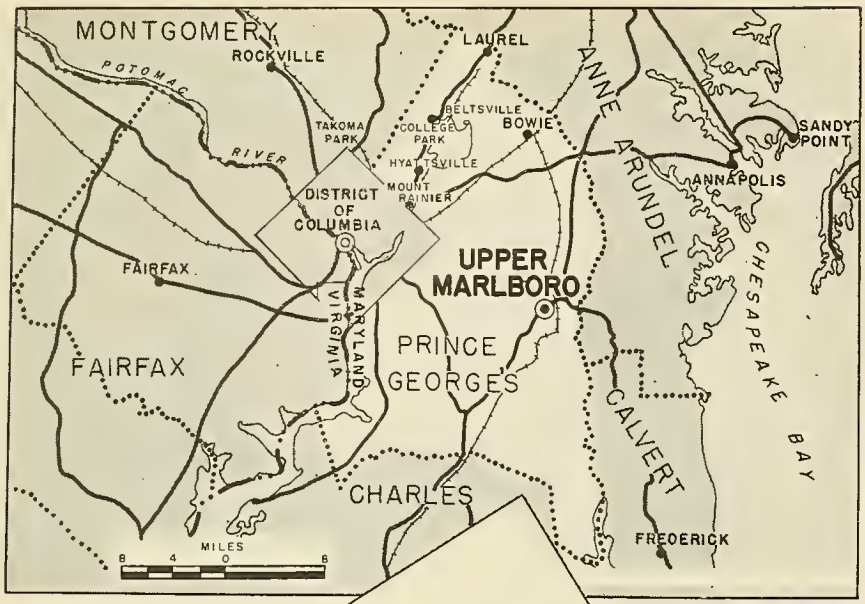
PRINCE GEORGE'S COUNTY



ESTABLISHED 1695

Prince George's County has an area of 485 square miles, a mean annual temperature of 55.9° and an annual precipitation of 44.16 inches. The northwestern portion of the County, adjoining Washington, D. C., is densely populated and largely residential. The southern part is still mainly agricultural. Tobacco is the chief money crop and Prince George's continues to be one of the State's leading counties in the cultivation of this plant. It also ranks first in the number of employees in mining and quarrying. The National Agricultural Research Center is located at Beltsville and the Goddard Space Flight Center, a part of National Aeronautics and Space Administration, at Greenbelt. The main campus of the University of Maryland is in College Park. The Bowie race track is in this County and the Laurel race track barely over the Prince George's—Anne Arundel county line. The County Seat is Upper Marlboro.

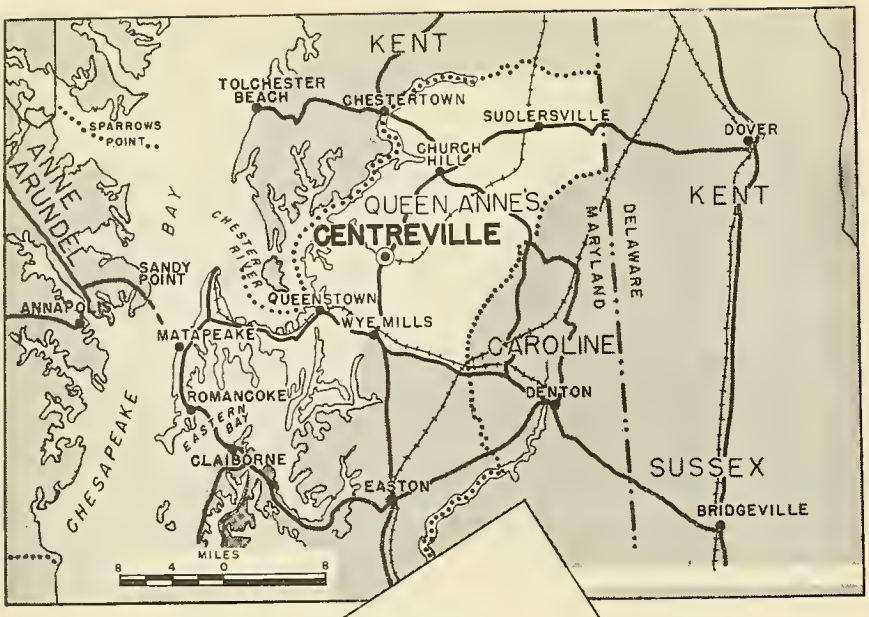
QUEEN ANNE'S COUNTY



ESTABLISHED 1706

Queen Anne's County, with a land area of 373 square miles, a mean annual temperature of 53.2° and an annual precipitation of 42.94 inches, is another Eastern Shore county where agriculture and fishing provide the chief sources of income. Food processing plants constitute the major part of the County's industrial activities. Like the other tidewater areas of the Eastern Shore, Queen Anne's attracts many hunting and fishing enthusiasts as well as summer vacationers. Since it is the eastern terminus of the Chesapeake Bay Bridge, it is easily accessible to all parts of the State. The many fine old colonial houses with their well kept grounds are among the most beautiful in this country. Within the County boundaries lies Kent Island, site of the first colonial settlement in the State of Maryland. The County Seat is Centreville.

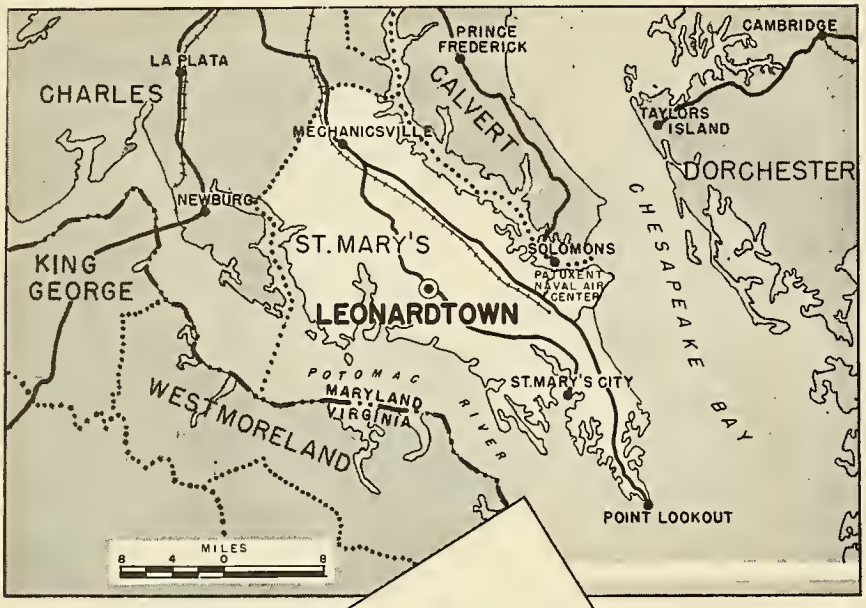
ST. MARY'S COUNTY



ESTABLISHED 1637

St. Mary's County has a land area of 367 square miles, an average annual temperature of 58.4° and an annual precipitation of 43.86 inches. Here is where the colonists first settled in 1634. The County is surrounded on three sides by water and it is not surprising that fishing is a most important industry. Tobacco is the leading agricultural product. In a State noted for its excellent food, certain places in St. Mary's County are outstanding for their fine cuisine. The Patuxent Naval Air Test Center, located at the mouth of the Patuxent River on the Chesapeake Bay, is an important federal installation which has had great influence on the economy of the area. St. Mary's County has many places of historic interest including the site of the first State Capitol. The County Seat is Leonardtown.

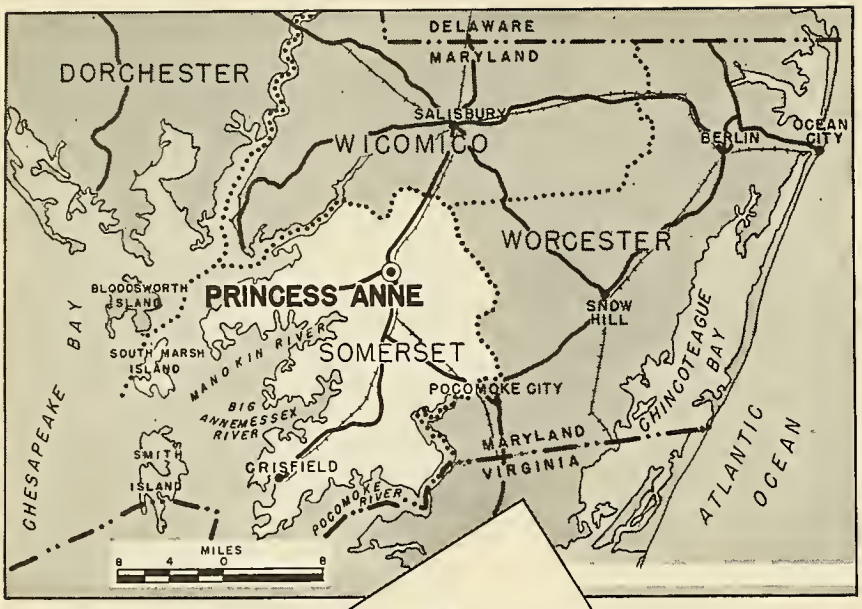
SOMERSET COUNTY



ESTABLISHED 1666

Somerset County has a land area of 332 square miles, a mean average temperature of 57.2° and an annual precipitation of 44.84 inches. Of great economic importance to the County is the seafood industry, especially in and around Crisfield, and the processing of seafood and truck farm products is the mainstay of the County's manufacturing industry. The farmers of the pine bordered country beyond the tidewater area concentrate on the production of poultry and poultry products—in which the County ranks third—corn, small grains, soybeans and vegetables. Somerset County, like its neighbors, has a tradition of quiet, gracious living. Princess Anne, trading center of the upper County, is the County Seat.

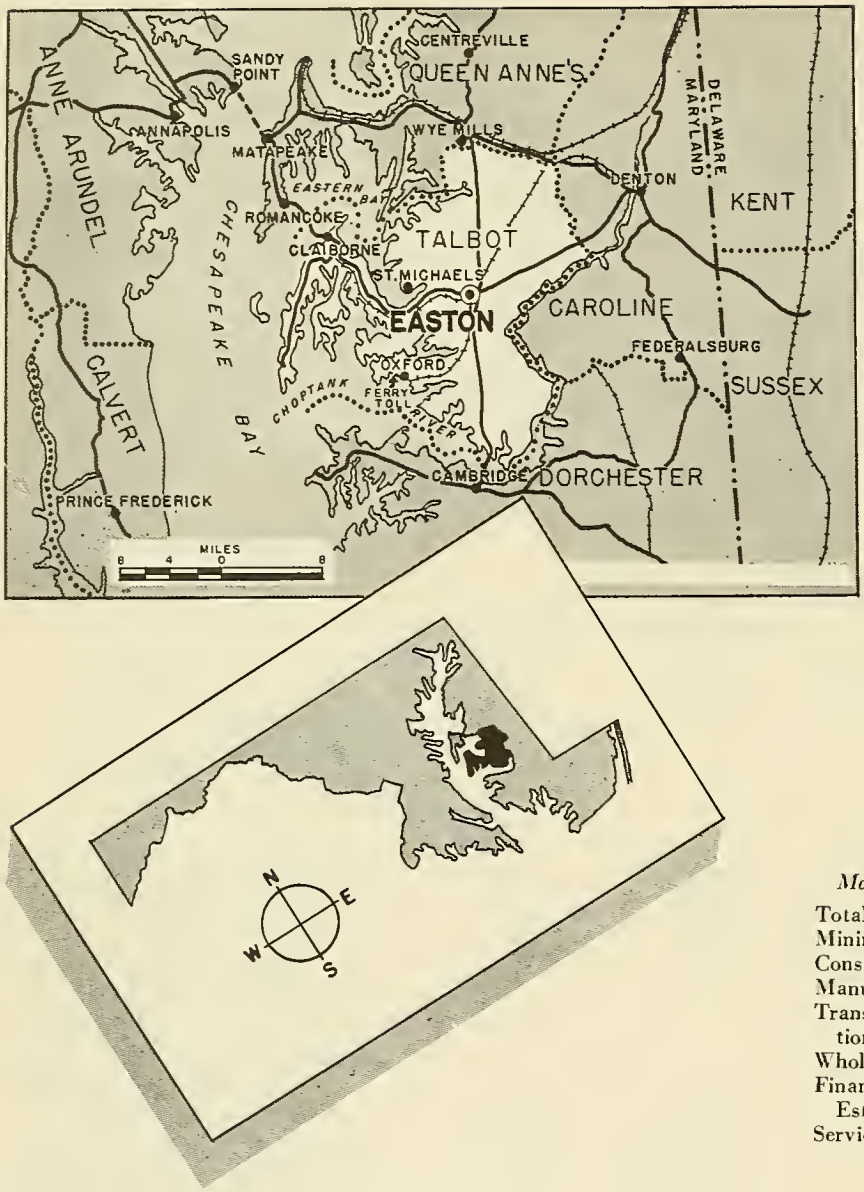
TALBOT COUNTY



ESTABLISHED 1661

Talbot County has a total land area of 279 square miles, a mean annual temperature of 56.3° and an annual precipitation of 44.31 inches. Because of the numerous bays and inlets, tidewater marshes are to be found along the waterways. However, over seventy-five percent of the County land is arable. Corn, small grains and soybeans are raised in quantities. Livestock and poultry raising, as well as dairying, are also important activities. Food processing and canning employ the largest number of factory workers. Oystering, commercial fishing, and boat building and repair are also important to the economy. Like its adjacent counties, Talbot is a mecca for yachtsmen, hunters, fishermen and summer vacationers. Many of the beautiful old homes and estates in the tidewater area are now owned by people who have moved here from outside the State. Easton is the County Seat.

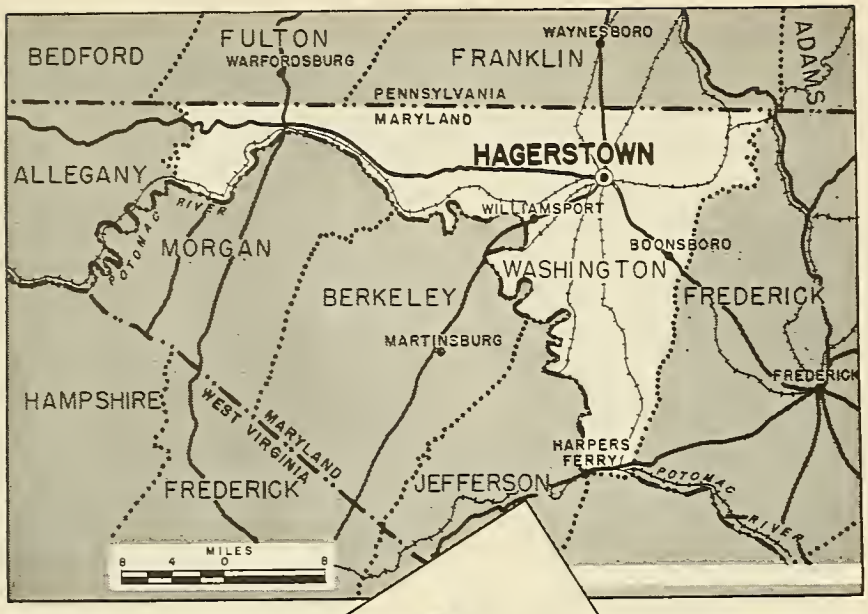
WASHINGTON COUNTY



ESTABLISHED 1776

Washington County has a total land area of 462 square miles, a mean annual temperature of 54.6° and an annual precipitation of 38.78 inches. The County is crossed by both the Shenandoah and the Cumberland Valleys, which contribute great scenic attraction to the area. It is also rich in reminders of colonial and Civil War days. At Antietam—or Sharpsburg—the bloodiest single day's fighting of that struggle took place. Over two-thirds of the land is devoted to agriculture and over one-half of fruit sold in the State is grown here. Dairying and livestock raising are also very important. Washington County has been one of the leading industrial centers of the State. This industry, which includes an aircraft plant, a truck plant and the largest pipe-organ factory in the world, is concentrated in and around Hagerstown, the County Seat. This community, which is advantageously located in respect to raw material and markets, is the second largest incorporated city in Maryland.

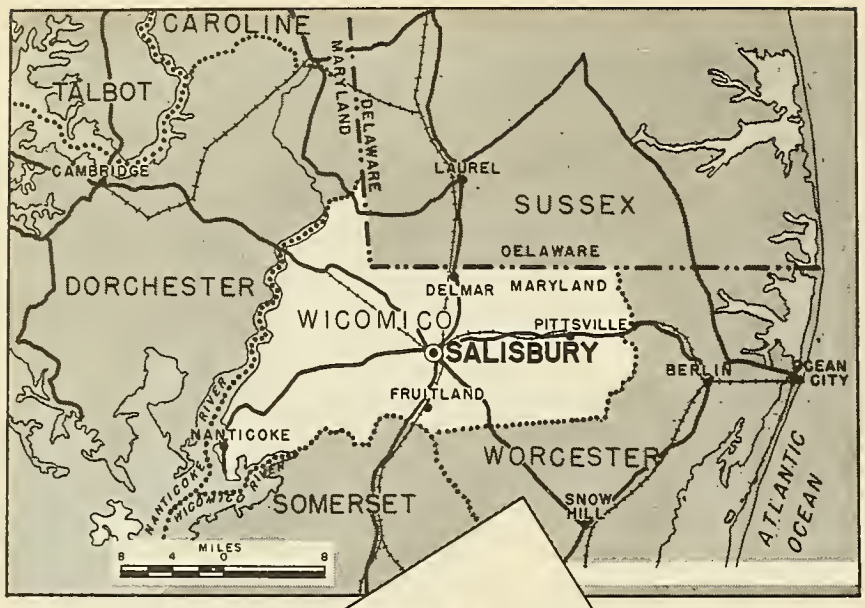
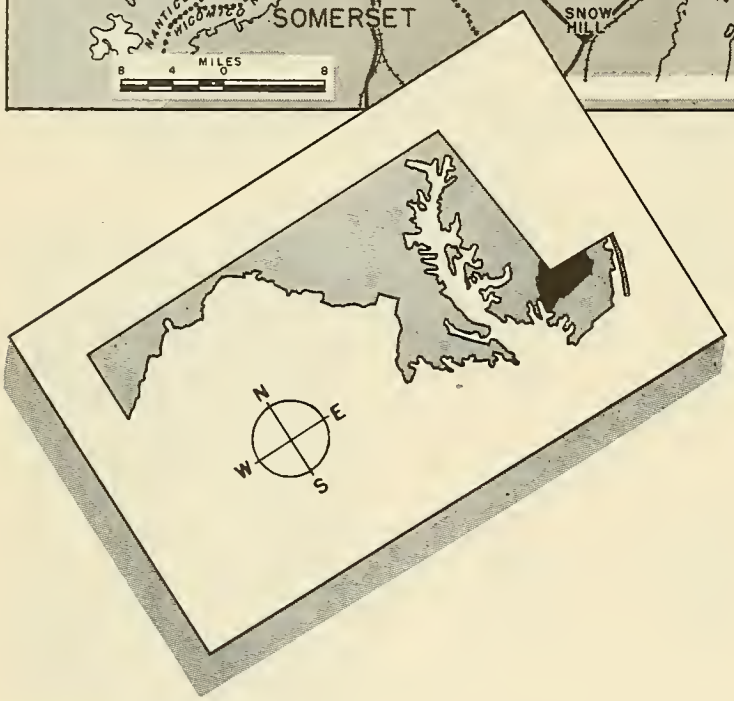
WICOMICO COUNTY





ESTABLISHED 1867

Wicomico County has a land area of 380 square miles, a mean annual temperature of 56.6° and an annual precipitation of 45.94 inches. The land, which is generally flat, is fertile and productive. The County leads the State in the value of farm products sold and specifically in the sale of poultry and poultry products. Corn, barley, rye, soybeans and vegetables, as well as large quantities of sweet potatoes are raised; nursery and greenhouse products represent a sizeable proportion of farm income. The greatest concentration of industry on the Eastern Shore is in and around Salisbury, the County Seat and largest city on the Eastern Shore. Food processing, clothing manufacturing and boat building engage many people. Lumbering and fishing are also important. The port of Salisbury has great potential and helps make this the most important commercial center of the Eastern Shore.

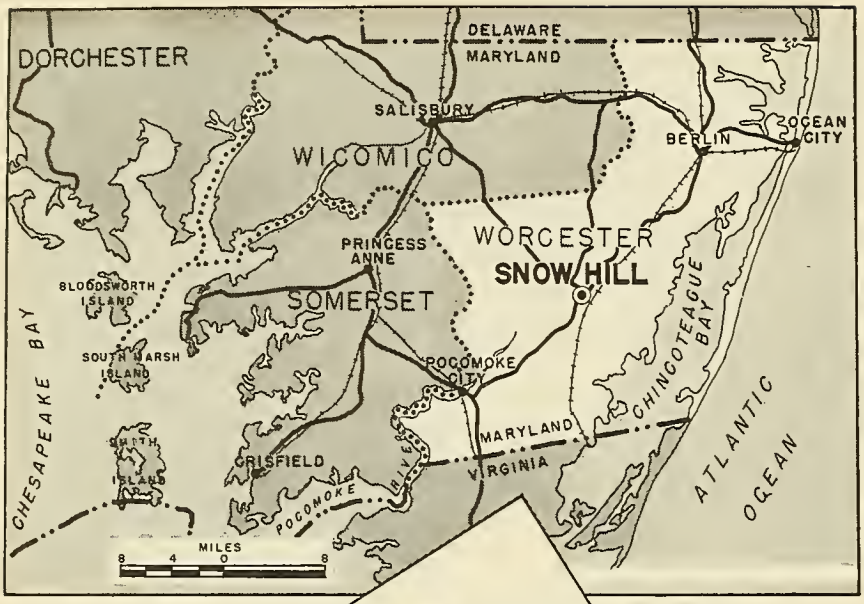
WORCESTER COUNTY



ESTABLISHED 1742

Worcester County, the only Maryland County on the Atlantic Ocean, has a land area of 483 square miles, a mean annual temperature of 56.7° and an annual precipitation of 48.07 inches. Third highest County of Maryland in the value of farm products sold, it ranks with the leaders in poultry production, but field crops, such as corn, small grains and soybeans, are also grown in quantity. Potatoes, sweet potatoes and such vegetables as tomatoes and snap beans represent a significant part of the crop. Peaches and apples too are important. Because of the tempering effects of the Ocean and the Bay, this area has an unusually long growing season and harvesting holly provides an unusual seasonal source of income. Canneries, nurseries and sawmills also furnish employment. In the eastern area of small, salty bays there is a rich store of fish, oysters and waterfowl. Ocean City, Maryland's largest seaside resort, is a mecca for summer vacationers. It is also a popular center for big game fishing. The County Seat is Snow Hill.
